TSP May Retain Fee Battle Counsel

By GAIL BURRIS
Texan Staff Writer

The Texas Student Publications Board of Operating Trustees (TSP) made an initial move Monday night to retain an attorney for possible legal action regarding The Daily Texan funding controversy.

The first of two resolutions passed by the TSP Board authorized an attorney to investigate a possible legal challenge to the University System Board of Regents' March 15 decision to change The Texan to an optional funding basis.

The other resolution requested the regents to make a TSP budget change of $15,000 from last year's earnings to retain legal counsel.

Legal action would be based on First Amendment press freedom and 14th Amendment "due process of law."

The board went into executive session immediately after convening to consult with legal counsel.

David Richards, a local labor attorney, delivered an opinion on the TSP Board's legal situation at the closed meeting.

Several board members conferred with

Richards last week, and four others will return to him on Tuesday, possibly to ask him to take the case.

The board's motion to retain an attorney is contingent on obtaining funds "through development of any available resource."

If the regents refuse the budget change, the TSP Board will look into the possibility of staging benefits and seeking contributions to raise funds for legal counsel.

TSP Board President Michael Moore said that funds cannot be guaranteed to hire an attorney until the regents authorize the budget change.

He said his next step is to meet with University President Stephen Spurr "to encourage him to petition the regents to put our request on their next agenda as an emergency item."

However, Texan Editor Michael Eakin said he hoped "the regents will be receptive to the budget change request, but I'm not optimistic. I think it's safe to say they won't approve it—that would be authorizing $15,000 for us to sue them."

Eakin said he was "enthusiastic about the board authorizing the retention of an attorney."

The board's resolution stated that a legal challenge to the regents' action would be based primarily on "a deprivation of the First and 14th Amendment rights."

Board member John Morris said he would like to see an attorney contacted about bringing suit based on breach of trust, aside from the constitutional arguments.

Morris said that Richards told the board "that we have a good case constitutionally. But he didn't encourage or discourage a lawsuit."

"It's long past time the board started looking into the constitutionality of the regents' decision," said Eakin. "The board has at last shown its desires to possibly take this to court."

Manhattan Blast Fells Building; 86 Persons Hurt

NEW YORK (AP) — A rumbling early morning explosion brought down a wall of a 26-story commercial building Monday and shook hundreds of residents out of their sleep on Manhattan's East Side, not far from the United Nations.

At least 86 persons were injured in the blast and fire or by shattered glass.

THE DIPLOMATIC missions of Nepal, Indonesia, Burundi and Laos, located in and around the wrecked building were severely rocked.

The Fire Department believed the blast came from an accumulation of gas leaking in the brick-and-steel structure at 312 E. 46th St. The building is situated midway between First and Second Avenues and faces both 46th and 45th Streets.

Ten persons were hurt seriously enough to require hospitalization, and three of them were listed as critical. Another 65 persons received treatment, mostly for lesser cuts, bruises and smoke inhalation. Eleven policemen hurt in rescue and search operations also needed treatment.

MANY OF the injured were residents of the Envoy Towers, a luxury high-rise apartment building adjacent to the commercial structure.

The Envoy Towers was evacuated and among its dazed occupants a newsman counted three-dozen persons, children included, bleeding from head and body cuts sustained when windows blew in.

The blast also buckled a number of doors and some residents had to break their way out.

"It sounded like a bomb and it lasted 5 to 10 seconds," said Dick Amen, a Vietnam veteran who lives across the street.

AMONG THE critically hurt was a crewman on a sanitation truck that happened to be picking up refuse at the commercial building. He was Frank Rinaldo, in the intensive care unit at Bellevue Hospital for burns of the lungs.

The early arrival at the commercial building was Jacob Weiss, assistant controller of Associated YM-YWCAs of New York, who was in his 15th-floor office at 6:40 a.m., 18 minutes before the blast. Weiss said he smelled a peculiar odor when he arrived and was on the telephone when the explosion shook the building.

"Goodbye, I'm going to get out," he said into the phone.

Weiss said he got down to the eighth floor before debris made the stairwells impassable. Firemen brought him down the rest of the way by aerial ladder.

FIRE COMMISSIONER John O'Hagan said the evidence pointed to a natural gas explosion, and the Fire Department ordered gas service shut off in the neighborhood as a precaution.

Two sweeps of the wrecked building by firemen and police turned up no bodies. The second sweep was interrupted for a time when an anonymous caller told police there was a bomb in the building. None was found.

A fire touched off by the explosion was confined to the main floor and cellar.

Voting Status Transferable Until Monday

Students needing to change voting precincts within Austin before the May 4 primary may do so Wednesday through Friday and Monday on the West Mall, and may vote absentee until April 30.

The Student Council for Voter Registration will man a table these days from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

"The purpose is to change students' precincts within Austin, as next Monday is the last day to do this before the primary," Greg Wool, chairman of the organization, said Monday.

He emphasized that they can only help students who have their voter registration card with them.

"If they have lost their card, they must go to the courthouse to change precincts," Wool said.

He said that students may also register to vote in Austin at this time but will not be eligible until the June 1 runoff.

"We can only change precincts for people who are presently registered to vote in Austin. For instance, we can't change someone from a Dallas precinct to one here," Wool said.

He said that students possibly may not receive a registration card in the mail before the primary, but their precinct will have been changed and they will still be eligible to vote.

Absentee voting will be held at the County Courthouse in the county clerk's office until April 30. A rally in Wooldridge Park from 2 to 8 p.m. Saturday will be held to encourage people to vote absentee. Free entertainment and refreshments will be provided.

Boudin Says President To Blame for Watergate Ellsberg's Attorney Visits Campus, Discusses 'Lawlessness' of Administration

By GARY EDWARD JOHNSON
Texan Staff Writer

Leonard Boudin, chief counsel for Daniel Ellsberg in the Pentagon papers trial, discussed Watergate and gave a first-hand account of the Ellsberg trial Monday in Townes Hall auditorium.

"The problem of official lawlessness that has filled our newspapers every day is not new," Boudin said, citing Teapot Dome, the "red scare" and McCarthyism.

Concerning Watergate, he said, "When the whole case is developed, subject to no more tape erasures, I think it will be proven he (President Nixon) had knowledge of what was going on."

"I AM WILLING to bet each of you a dollar that the President — who I believe to be guilty of certain crimes — will not be convicted of any crimes" in court, Boudin commented.

Recognizing Nixon might have had no early knowledge of Watergate, Boudin said the President should still be held accountable for acts of his subordinates and be impeached.

Boudin cited a declaration by the first session of Congress which said if the President does not fire employees of the executive branch whom Congress does not like, then Congress should "fire" the President.

"PRIOR to 1789, 'high crimes and misdemeanors' did not mean crimes," Boudin noted. "In England men have even been impeached for giving bad advice."

"If the present President does not know what is going on, let's get one who does," he concluded.

The defense attorney for Ellsberg and Anthony Russo in the Pentagon papers trial in Los Angeles was bitter about the offer by the Nixon administration to make Judge Matthew Byrne director of the FBI.

"Members of the Administration were trying to see if they could persuade Byrne not to tell us about the burglary" of the office of Dr. Lewis Fielding, Ellsberg's psychiatrist, Boudin claimed.

"If we had offered the judge a job in my law firm," Boudin said, he would have been thrown in jail.

BYRNE DECLINED the FBI directorship, disclosed the burglary of Ellsberg's psychiatrist and eventually dismissed the Ellsberg-Russo case because of "government misconduct."

Charges that Ellsberg committed theft of the Pentagon papers were "incomprehensible," Boudin said, because "a Rand Corporation document said Ellsberg was the only person authorized to possess the Pentagon papers."

A member of the audience asked Boudin how he could be angered by the conviction of World War II Japanese Gen. Yamashita for subordinates' acts of which he was unaware, but can seek the conviction of Nixon even if he was unaware of his subordinates' acts.

"I do not think a President can be convicted (in court) for acts of his workers," but one can be impeached and removed from office for the same reason, Boudin replied.

ALTHOUGH A major charge against the Watergate defendants is conspiracy, the Yale instructor remarked, "I still don't like conspiracy prosecutions. I think most of them could be caught on aiding and abetting."

Reminded that most of those Watergate defendants were lawyers, Boudin expressed hope for the profession's future.

"I have more confidence in this generation of lawyers than the current group," he said.

The speech was sponsored by the School of Law, Student Bar Association, Texas Union Ideas and Issues Committee, the National Lawyers Guild and the Political Rights Fund.

Kennedy, Brezhnev Discuss Arms Race

MOSCOW (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy and Communist Party leader Leonid I. Brezhnev expressed optimism Monday that "substantial progress" can be made to curb the arms race and maintain peace between the superpowers.

During a four-hour meeting, Brezhnev said he would like to visit the United States again "on business."

Following the Kremlin session, Kennedy flew to the Georgian capital of Tbilisi.

In a brief statement, the Massachusetts Democrat said he and Brezhnev expressed "the deep commitment of their two countries to maintaining peace between them, bringing the arms race firmly under control, and to working out productive relations in a host of other areas."

Kennedy, on a one-week visit to Russia, said he and Brezhnev were optimistic "substantial progress toward these goals could be achieved."

Before the meetings, newsmen asked Brezhnev about the status of Soviet-American detente. "Matters go well."

They're all aimed at peace. Why shouldn't we be satisfied," he replied.

Kennedy said the talks in Brezhnev's study touched on several subjects, including the Middle East, economic cooperation, trade and emigration.

It was understood that the optimism expressed in the statement did not refer to the sensitive question of Jewish emigration from the Soviet Union — an issue tied to U.S.-Soviet trade.

Kennedy has been among congressional opponents of granting tariff concessions and American credits to the Soviet Union unless emigration policies are modified.

Brezhnev's allotting four hours in a busy day to Kennedy was seen as a sign the Communist Party leader recognizes Kennedy may run for president in the future.

Kennedy says he has no intention of running in 1976, but his current tour indicates he may be laying the foreign policy groundwork for a change of mind.

Brezhnev greets Sen. and Mrs. Kennedy, Ted Jr., and daughter Kara.

Parking Violations 'Low'

By DIANA KERR
University police issued 54,577 parking tickets last year. Despite the impressively high number, Asst. Police Chief W.L. Purse considers the figure to be low in relation to the number of cars in the area and number of actual violations that occur.

Although the traffic division issues more than twice as many permits as spaces, N.G. Morris of the Parking and Traffic Division claimed there are surplus parking areas but a shortage of parking where people want to park. Morris said this explains the higher incidence of violations in the central campus area.

TICKETS ISSUED for flagrant parking violations such as parking in a "D" lot without a disabled permit cost the violator $10, major offenses which comprise most common violations such as failing to display the proper permit for the space occupied cost $5, and minor offenses like backing into an angled space cost $2. The University collected $109,012.91 from tickets last year.

"The money is used to take care of the cost of administering the Parking and Traffic Division and traffic enforcement," William Wilcox, director of the Physical Plant, said. Money also goes into wages and salaries for University police and security guards, improving and maintaining parking areas and for the upkeep of signs, he added.

Once the tickets are issued, a complex process of collection begins. A person who receives a ticket must go to the Service Building and pay within 10 days or the charge doubles. Once the total charge is $25 the division sends the violator a letter informing him that he owes on back tickets. If the violator still fails to respond, a letter informs him that the tickets are being forwarded to the University police.

The letters are sent to the address submitted when the parking permit was issued. When no address is available, or the car has no permit, an address is traced through the state vehicle registration number (license plates).

Austinites Offered Huntsville Trips

The Huntsville Bus Project is offering one-day bus rides for Austinites wishing to visit relatives or friends in Texas prisons.

The trips, which reach 14 Texas Department of Correction units, are made twice a month and cost $8 for adults and $2 for children under 12 years of age.

"WE FEEL that there are University students who have friends in prison and could use this service to visit them," Janet Stockhard, an Austin attorney and one of the project organizers, said.

About 15 people ride a rented van to the Huntsville prison units on the second Saturday of each month, Ms. Stockhard said. A trip to the seven units around Houston is made on the third Saturday. The trips usually last from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m., she said.

The bus project was organized two years ago by Ms. Stockhard and Bill Holder, both University law graduates. Holder has since left Texas to attend graduate school. The Austin project was patterned after a California group that car pooled to prison farms, Ms. Stockhard said.

"THIS SERVICE is very useful," Velma Cruse, a passenger-turned-volunteer, said. "Before, people weren't sure where to go, and a car or bus trip costs too much."

"Most of our passengers have become involved in the project," Ms. Stockhard said. "They sell the tickets and take our calls, and generally organize the trips."

"Our big problem, though, is trying to get the word out about the project. Sometimes we feel like we're missing those who need it most," she said.

Tickets may be purchased at the Safeway store at 12th Street and IH 35 on the first Saturday of the month, or reservations may be made by phone, Ms. Stockhard said. "Or if people show up Saturday morning, (at the store) and there's still room, they can go," she said.

Bales Calls for Innovations

State Rep. Larry Bales, Democratic candidate for the U.S. House, called Monday for revision of the "stagnant" Congress with new ideas and new approaches.

In a lecture sponsored by University Young Democrats, Bales spoke to a small group of students in the Union Building. He said Congress cannot respond to the crisis presently before the American people, calling Congress "cumbersome" and "unwilling to face the issues."

Of the many issues in the campaign, Bales cited two topics as the most important. First, he said, is the impeachment issue.

Because of the impeachment situation, Congress may become dominated by Democrats, which is "not necessarily a healthy thing," Bales said.

Bales commented on the 18-minute gap in the tapes provided by the White House, calling it contempt of Congress, a probable cause for impeachment.

A second important issue in the campaign is "the whole idea of the energy crisis." Bales called this a good example of "congressional inaction."

UT Student Found Dead

University student Thomas George Richmond of 2812 Hemphill Park was found dead in his bedroom Monday afternoon when his roommates returned home from school.

Justice of the Peace Jim Dear pronounced Richmond dead at 5:45 p.m. but declined to state the cause of death awaiting results of an autopsy.

The 22-year-old junior from Alvin was enrolled in the College of Humanities.

Certain environmental advances are now in danger, he said. Bales cited the ecologically controversial Alaskan pipeline and the abolition of mandatory emission control devices as examples of environmental dangers.

Bales stated he supported an excess profits tax on oil companies, a rollback in oil prices, the abolition of the oil depletion allowance and a restriction on automobile horsepower.

Bales said his primary election opponent, U.S. Rep. J.J. "Jake" Pickle, was "running scared."

McCreary

Lou McCreary, Democratic candidate for state representative, Place 4, called Monday for the resignations of Travis County Democratic Party Chairman Ken Wendler and his political organizers, party endorsements, the local Democratic boss (Wendler) is attempting to set up his own political machine to control Travis County.

"Wendler is attempting to control the student vote through Young, his paid political organizer. The method used on campus is to have Wendler candidates endorsed by the 'Student Action Committee,' (which Young headed while he was a student) to create the appearance of wide student support for Wendler's favorites."

"Wendler mistakenly believes that Peck Young can deliver the students to the polls like a herd of sheep. Like all other efforts to curtail the independence of the student voter, this effort is marked for failure," McCreary said.

He added that if Wendler and Young don't resign, voters should write in the name of Bob Sneed for reelection to the post of Democratic chairman as a "protest" against Wendler's administration.

Wendler is running for reelection in the May 4 primary unopposed.

When asked about McCreary's accusations, Wendler said he had made no effort to organize Travis County for any politician.

"I might encourage or discourage candidacies prior to filing, but after that I don't support any primary candidate," he said.

"Travis is a very sophisticated county politically, and anyone who thinks they can organize it into a political machine doesn't know what they're talking about."

Wendler said he was completely surprised about McCreary's remarks. "The only contact McCreary has had with my office is with the secretary."

Weiss

Counties should be given the authority to regulate property developments within their limits, Gerald Weiss, candidate for state representative, Place 4, said Monday. Weiss said cities presently have control over developments if they are within the five-mile extrajurisdictional jurisdiction beyond the city limits.

"Right now the counties don't have any authority," Weiss said. He called for the Legislature to enact a law giving the counties regulating authority.

Endorsements

Mike Renfro, candidate for county judge, was endorsed by a second Austin legal organization last week.

The Austin Junior Bar Association endorsed Renfro over his opponents, Hubert Gill, Terry Weeks and Lawson Boothe, as did the Travis County Bar Association earlier.

"I believe their support is based on my legal ability, my service as legal counsel to the county and my wide range of county government experience," Renfro said.

Renfro added that he was proud of the endorsements because they were not politically motivated or unethical procured.

'Gentle' Childbirth Popular in France

By Zodiac News Service
A new method of childbirth is sweeping France and will probably become popular in the United States within the next year.

The method creating this sensation was developed by French obstetrician Frederick Leboyer and is based on a revolutionary concept in child delivery — gentleness.

Leboyer, in his book "for birth without violence," argues that the traditional method of giving birth today produces absolute panic in a newborn baby. Leboyer says that taking a newborn baby from its mother's womb, exposing it to the bright lights of the delivery room, cutting its umbilical cord and then spanking it until it cries is utterly terrifying to the newborn child.

Leboyer believes that traditional birth — which he calls violent delivery — subjects the infant to a subconscious fear of life that it never forgets.

The Leboyer method of gentleness attempts to avoid the terror of being born in this way: As the birth is about to occur, the obstetrician turns down the lights in the delivery room to avoid frightening the infant.

The baby is then removed from the womb slowly and carefully, and is placed gently on the mother's stomach where it feels her breathing. The baby is then stroked gently by a nurse, the umbilical cord still attached, for about 10 minutes. The cord is then cut, and the child is placed in a lukewarm bath, where it is gently caressed.

IT'S TIME TO REFORM CAMPAIGN FINANCING

John W. Gardner, Chairman
Common Cause
Former Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare

"Wouldn't it be great if you didn't have to take a single dime from anybody?" said Senator Philip Hart of Michigan. He had in mind the uncomfortable, sometimes degrading, experiences that political candidates have when they go hat-in-hand to potential donors for contributions.

The costs of political campaigns have gone sky-high. And monied special interests are always glad to meet those costs in behalf of the candidate. The inevitable result has been corruption, scandal and public mistrust of the political process.

Today in most districts and states, candidates can't run for public office unless they are rich, or unless they are willing to put themselves under obligation to sources of funds. That isn't the kind of country we started out to be.

There are honest contributors who give out of conviction, and there are honest politicians who don't repay gifts with political favors. But let's face it: most large political gifts are made with the intent to buy influence, buy votes, buy politicians.

The first principle of free self-government is accountability of government to the citizen. Elections are the chief means through which citizens enforce that accountability. But if the winning candidate feels that his first obligation is to his big campaign donors, public accountability is destroyed.

Here are some of the necessary ingredients of reform.

- 1) There must be low ceilings on individual or committee gifts.
- 2) There must be limits on spending — although these must not be set too low or they will handicap challengers.
- 3) There must be full public disclosure of all gifts and expenditures. One of the most powerful forces for clean government ever discovered is the light of day.
- 4) There must be an independent enforcement commission with subpoena powers and the power to go to court. It is shocking but true that no federal campaign financing law has ever been seriously enforced by the Justice Department.

Many are now beginning to see that there is one further necessary ingredient if we are to have a responsible and competitive political system — namely, an element of public financing in campaigns.

Money for campaigns need not come totally and exclusively from public funds. The bill recently debated in the Senate permits a role for money from private sources, although it places a ceiling on the size of gifts. It encourages small private contributions by providing that they will be matched up to $100 each with public funds at the primary level.

No candidate in the primaries will receive any federal matched funds unless he or she has demonstrated the ability to raise small private gifts up to a specific threshold amount. This will screen out frivolous candidates or candidates with no constituency.

There are legitimate questions as to the mechanics of public financing, but these questions can be dealt with. The real question is whether we intend to put behind us once and for all a system of campaign financing in which money can buy political outcomes.

There is much more to do. And the time to do it is now. The American people are tired of being bilked and manipulated. It's time to give this country back to its people. For additional information, write Common Cause, 2030 M St. N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036.

Final HEW Probe Begins

By RICHARD FLY
Texas Staff Writer

A team of investigators from the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) arrived in Austin Monday to begin their last week of inquiry into allegations of discrimination in University employment and student recruitment practices.

The four-person team from the Dallas Office of Civil Rights and Contract Compliance will focus on policies governing employment and recruitment of nonacademic and staff personnel.

Investigators have made two previous trips to the campus, probing student affairs and academic employment practices.

Monday the team met with administrators in the University Personnel Office.

"WE JUST went over some general policy, particularly promotional and transfer policy," Bill Wallace, assistant director of the office, said.

Director of the personnel office, Norman Minter, was out of town Monday but will meet with investigators Tuesday.

The four investigators have divided into two teams to conduct more interviews.

Administrators included in their itinerary Tuesday are J. Neils Thompson, director of the Balcones Research Center and professor of civil engineering; Dr. Paul Trickett, director of the Student Health Center; Don Cannon, chief of University police; Joe Mitchell, superintendent of buildings and grounds; and Jane Jolly, administrative assistant to the Hogg Foundation for Mental Health.

INVESTIGATORS have been "very noncommittal" in any preliminary conclusions based on their collected data, Mary Teague, University equal employment opportunity officer, said.

"They haven't really given me any feedback," she added.

Although their study should be completed this week, the final report of the HEW team's findings and recommendations will not be released until late May. Sandra Williams, team chairperson, said Thursday.

Preliminary findings may be released early, she added.

SHOULD inequities be found in University hiring and recruitment practices, failure to correct them could result in loss of $12 million in annual federal funds.

The investigation stems from three complaints filed independently with HEW last fall charging discrimination at the University.

Investigators may be reached in Main Building 206 or at 471-1293.

UT Commencement Scheduled May 18

By MARY MURTAUGH

The schedule of activities for Commencement Day, May 18, have been announced by Dr. H. Malcolm Macdonald, chairman of the Commencement Committee and University government professor.

The day-long series of events will be highlighted by the 91st formal graduation exercise at 8 p.m. on the terrace south of Main Building.

The commencement address will be given by Navy Capt. Alan L. Bean of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration in Houston. The astronaut is a 1955 graduate of the University.

At 9 a.m., exercises for the commissioning of Army, Navy and Air Force ROTC members will be held at Hogg Auditorium. The address will be delivered by Lt. Gen. Orwin C. Talbot, deputy commanding general of the U.S. Army Training and Doctrine Command, Ft. Monroe, Va. A reception will be held afterward for all guests, faculty and students in the Union Junior Ballroom.

The interdenominational baccalaureate service will be held at 10:30 a.m. at Hogg Auditorium. The speaker will be the Most Rev. John E. Hines, presiding bishop of the Episcopal Church in the United States.

Convocations of individual colleges and schools will be held throughout the afternoon, in which degree candidates will be recognized individually by their respective deans. Receptions for the degree candidates, their families and friends are planned after each convocation. Several colleges and schools will have guest speakers and the announcement of student awards.

In case of rain, formal commencement will be held at the same time but in Municipal Auditorium. Public admission will be by ticket because of restricted seating. Each degree candidate receives two rain tickets for the use of guests.

The wearing of caps and gowns is required for the evening ceremony, but dress is optional at baccalaureate. Practices vary from college to college for the afternoon convocations and students should check with their colleges for instructions.

The times and places for the afternoon convocations are:

12:45 p.m. — College of Education, Hogg Auditorium.
1 p.m. — College of Engineering, LBJ Auditorium.
1:30 p.m. — Graduate School, Union Main Ballroom; College of Humanities, Burdine Hall 106; Division of General and Comparative Studies, Art Building 1.
2 p.m. and 4:30 p.m. — School of Law, Townes Auditorium.
2 p.m. — LBJ School of Public Affairs, East Campus Lecture Hall.
3:30 p.m. — School of Communication, Hogg Auditorium.

Increased Teacher Salaries Sought

School Board Trustees List Education Needs

By AUBURN FABER
and
BARBARA MINNICK

Although its first meeting has not been held, the new Board of Trustees of the Austin Independent School District apparently is unified on at least two levels. Of the five members contacted, all expressed the need Monday for more community contribution to the board's decisions as well as a salary increase for teachers.

Jerry Nugent, a newly-elected trustee, said he hopes his presence on the board will "effect a change in committees, councils and procedures in the decision-making process, so that teachers, parents, students and the administration will have a meaningful say" in the board's activities.

RATHER THAN school board-appointed committee and council members, Nugent said he would like to see the members appointed from community groups such as the PTA or Human Relations Council.

Trustee Carol McClellan said she will work for school board "openness. The public deserves complete information and a chance for input before decisions are made," she said.

Other concerns Nugent outlined include more program evaluation and a more meaningful teacher evaluation. The program evaluation will enable board members "to find out if what we are doing is helping children to learn, because that's the ball game."

GUS GARCIA, another board member, said the new school board will place emphasis on increased salaries for Austin teachers and on evaluating new programs recently introduced, such as team-teaching and individually-guided education. He said he will also work for increased minority representation on Austin school faculties.

"Since we might have some money left over this year, I'd like to see it put into minority programs," he said.

As a newly-elected board member, DeCourcy Kelly's interests lie in setting new priorities in the school budget, which includes improved teaching equipment and an increase in teacher's salaries.

The salary increase, Mrs. Kelly said, would improve the quality of education and help in recruiting teachers into the system.

The increase for teachers is a "must," Nugent said. He said he "won't take no for an answer" in seeking it. "I am hopeful the increase will come before the end of the current school session," he said.

Ms. McClellan stressed her concern for teacher morale, which she said can be improved by cooperation with administrators and parents along with the salary increase.

"TEACHERS ARE the most important ingredient in better education," she said. "If teacher morale is improved, the quality of curriculum — what goes on in the classroom — will be increased."

M.K. Hage said he does not feel the change in personnel will adversely affect the school board. "Everyone who ran was concerned about schools, about the quality of education," he said.

Garcia, who is in favor of geographic representation, said he feels the new board is somewhat imbalanced geographically. He said the group is philosophically cohesive, however, and that it "leans the right way for me."

Madden Named Head Of Ex-Students' Group

Wales H. Madden Jr., an Amarillo attorney, has been named president of the University Ex-Student's Association.

Madden will succeed Foster Parker of Houston, whose term expires July 1. Madden will serve a two-year term.

Madden, a member of the Texas College and University System Coordinating Board, graduated from the University in 1950 and earned his law degree in 1952. While at the University, Madden served as Students' Association president and was named Outstanding Male Student in 1951.

Madden served on the University System Board of Regents from 1959 to 1965. Before that, he served on the Board of Regents of Amarillo College for two years.

Madden is a partner in the Amarillo law firm of Selectman and Madden and was president of the State Junior Bar Association of Texas in 1959.

Parker will become chairman of the association's Executive Committee. Executive Committee members for 1974-75 are: Madden; Gordon Rountree, Waco, first vice-president; John Ben Shepperd, Odessa, second vice-president; Jack Maguire, Austin, secretary and George Meriwether, Austin, treasurer.

In other Ex-Student's Association business Saturday, junior home economics major Janet Lynne Miles of San Antonio was awarded a $300 scholarship.

comment On to court

In a vote Monday the Texas Student Publications Board has taken an important first step in its fight to retain a stable financial base for The Daily Texan. At the meeting the board requested that TSP General Manager Lloyd Edmonds authorize an attorney to examine the grounds for legal action against UT's Board of Regents — the first step toward a lawsuit.

AS DEFINED by law student Steve Simkin, former student body president Sandy Kress and Austin attorney David Richards, TSP's legal case is grounded on an abridgement of the First and 14th Amendments. According to their and other legal advice, the regents' March 15 cut of Texan funding deprived TSP of due process and constituted a punitive response to protected First Amendment freedoms. TSP's attorney — when hired — will in addition examine the grounds for suit over violation of the regent-TSP Trust Agreement. Litigation in the courts will define the board's responsibilities to TSP, and in addition require a reinstitution of present funding.

To effectuate the above ends, the TSP Board adopted two motions, one wishful and unnecessary, the other practical and overdue. By requesting a $15,000 budgetary change for the retention of legal counsel, TSP is essentially asking that the regents pass favor on a lawsuit against themselves. The regents have time and time again manifested their hostility to The Texan; they are not likely to change their colors pending a court suit.

THE SECOND TSP MOTION is more realistic. By consulting an attorney on an ongoing basis, the board will move at last toward what is ostensibly the only persuasion the regents understand: the courts. If TSP funds may not be used to finance the suit, individuals on the TSP Board may be forced to solicit funds. When and if that takes place, moral and financial support from the campus community will be essential if The Texan is to afford legal representation.

In either case the TSP Board has taken a positive step towards resolving its regent-invoked funding predicament. If left to the Board of Regents The Texan may well rot in a state of financial purgatory for the rest of its existence. As the regents know all too well, that threatened existence is unproductive to the workings of a free and unfettered campus press. On to court. — M.E.

Money everywhere

Congressperson J.J. "Jake" Pickle has been unusually frank in his financial disclosure statements, and this frankness is commendable — but a cynical view of Pickle's openness would point to his near disastrous encounter with conflict of interest in 1968.

IN THAT YEAR, KHFI-TV — then under Republican management — dredged up the story of a Pickle land deal east of Austin. Pickle and two friends bought a tract of land in 1959 from three of the Connally brothers — Merrill, 1972 lieutenant governor candidate Wayne, and former Gov. John — for about $123 per acre. In 1961, Pickle acquired another adjoining tract. In 1963, a construction firm well known for its connections in Shiverscrat politics, Brown & Root, contracted to recommend a site for a municipal reservoir. A year later, Brown & Root suggested a site that included the Pickle tract, which was duly condemned by the city at a price of $350 per acre. Pickle and friends had tripled their money.

The KHFI report, however, failed to point out that Pickle had sold a small part of the tract in 1963 at the same price — strongly suggesting that the worth of the land had indeed tripled. The TV station did not raise the question of whether Pickle could have been aware of the Brown & Root contract and arranged the smaller transaction to cover himself. This lack of diligence, and the partisan character of the station's management, led most people to disregard the story.

INDEED, A KHFI newsmen admitted that Pickle and friends "were doing nothing more than following the dictates of good land speculation." Pickle himself, in a prepared statement, called the deal "an investment, based on the expected future growth of Austin."

Pickle apparently continues to expect profits based on growth. As of 1972, he held interests in more than 1,000 acres of land in his congressional district. We consider the 1964 land deal only marginally improper, especially considering the political climate of that time; many pols were guilty of much more blatant feeding at the public trough. But Pickle's past and continuing involvement in land speculation raises the perfectly sensible question of whether he is qualified to represent the interests of those people who wish to protect the environment from the ravages of unchecked growth. —S.R.

Hooray! Hooray!

Federal energy chief William Simon has come out strongly in favor of the controversial floating nuclear power plants.

These plants, called "floating nukes," are atomic reactors that would be mounted on barges and then moored a few miles off the East and West Coasts. Current designs call for the plants to be built on barges which would be about 400 feet square, rise 180 feet above the water and weigh 160,000 tons.

The government recently gave the go-ahead to a Florida company to begin building a construction yard which will eventually turn out dozens of floating nukes.

One of the leading critics of floating nukes is MIT nuclear physicist Dr. Henry Kendall. Kendall states that an accident in a floating nuke could be even worse than a land-based reactor because the water and tides would quickly carry radioactive material to nearby shores. Says Kendall, "Such an event is a catastrophe of a kind the country has never experienced."

Simon, on the other hand, wants construction to begin on the floating nukes at once. Said Simon, "Such power plants can be produced in quantity and floated to locations through the world to produce power rapidly." Simon said he can envision a day when there are at least 500 floating nukes on the seas around the earth. —Z.N.

No biz like impeachment

By NICHOLAS VON HOFFMAN
©1974 The Washington Post-King Features Syndicate

WASHINGTON — A congressman was overheard, the other day, saying in tones of angry laughter, "We're going to impeach his ass. We're going to do it."

He's right. We're going to do it, although nobody will quite know why. In the case of President Andrew Johnson, policy as well as pride and personality were involved. Nixon's policies, such as they are, would never get another man impeached. Nevertheless, one senses the decision has been made and that some time in the next year or so, if not sooner, Nixon will be impeached, convicted and thrown out onto the sidewalks of Pennsylvania Avenue. Your daily newspaper will carry a picture of the rear end of the moving van, and a caption will explain that some of the van's contents may become tax-deductible gifts.

None of this has to do with whether there are enough votes in the House of Representatives to do him in now. Before too long there will be. But the formal process of legal impeachment has to wait upon a kind of informal social impeachment, whereby the man is stripped of the reverence, protections and deference with which we treat our Presidents. He has to be tried, convicted, disgraced and expelled before he is formally accused.

That goes against our much-quoted dictum that a man is innocent until proved guilty, but such is our awe of the presidential office that we can't lay rough, legal hands on its occupant, unless we are already certain of his guilt. The process is terribly unjust to Nixon, who can't possibly get a fair trial, but it will preserve the kind of monarchical presidency that we dote on.

For openers, a pariah To accomplish this, Nixon must be turned into a pariah before the House Judiciary Committee recommends his impeachment. We have a thousand devices for that. Until a few months ago, any American president could have sent the IRS his American Express slips and doodles on April 15 and gotten a pass. But now under the dispensation of impeachment, Nixon is going "to be treated like everybody else." A President is only treated like everybody else when he is on his way to being turned into a non-President.

You strip Nixon of the golden aura of potens et majestas by having Galloping poll takers bounce around the country, asking if we think the President should be impeached. An even better example is a recent Harris Survey that ran in one paper under a headline reading: "Public Belives Dean Over President." The wording of the question itself would have laid Harris open to charges of blasphemy and lese majesty a year ago: "Who do you think has been more truthful about the Watergate cover-up — President Nixon or John Dean?"

Small, unflattering tidbits about Nixon and his family are now broadcast and repeated with the special satisfaction of the self-righteous. Other Presidents have had to take this kind of insulting deglamorization from their enemies, but Nixon is getting it from almost everybody. Had the French come forward with a bunch of documents to prove that Louis XVI wasn't really the legitimate King of France, they would be doing what we're doing. We're showing ourselves that we aren't committing regicide, because this character Nixon isn't our real king.

Nixon plays his part

In all of this, Nixon has been unflinchingly cooperative. By playing with his yo-yo in public, by swearing he isn't a crook, by his hand-pumping vulgarities at Pompidou's funeral, by two-dozen gaucheries large and small, he makes it easier and easier for his friends to disavow him. The way he has released the tapes and other materials almost seems calculated to do him maximum damage. He does it with so many delays and evasions he gets no points for cooperation, and the trickle of information is slow enough so that the whole nation has time to focus on each petty theft, each tax delinquency, each bit of rottenness that affronts our ideal of the presidency.

Beyond all questions of guilt or innocence, he must be impeached because we, the Super Bowl people, have been promised the show. We're gearing up for it emotionally the way we did when the ballyhoo built up for the Billie Jean King-Bobby Riggs match. The business is already so advanced that some people, like James Reston of The New York Times, are pressing for a TV blackout, but that can never be. We are a free people and we have been guaranteed the right to watch everything live in our living room.

Vietnam and the Paris accords

By JOAN FRIEDLAND
(Editor's note — At the invitation of the Vietnamese Lawyers Association, three members of the National Lawyers Guild spent 12 days last December visiting the Democratic Republic of Vietnam. Joan Friedland, a lawyer with the Community Law Center in Santa Fe, N.M., was one of the three; she will be reviewing her trip, including a slide show, at a program Thursday at the Friends House. A pot luck supper begins at 6:30 p.m.)

Arriving in the Democratic Republic of Vietnam (DRVN), we stepped off our plane to a reception of flowers, warm handshakes and eager greetings. Our host, the Vietnamese Lawyers Association (VLA), emphasized solidarity again and again — between our countries, between progressive and peace loving peoples and between our legal organizations. The Vietnamese carefully and repeatedly distinguish between the U.S. government and the American people.

We met with several political leaders — Hoang Tung, who is editor of Nahn Dan, the daily paper of the party and the Presidium of the Fatherland Front and vice-president of the VLA. We also met with the head of the Provisional Revolutionary Government (PRG) delegation to the DRVN, Nguyen Van Tien, and discussed U.S. and Saigon violations of the Paris agreement in the South.

Two areas we discussed over and over that need to be stressed will be treated sketchily in this article, with hopes that further discussion here in Austin will be stimulated.

Noncompliance

The first is the Paris agreement itself. We were urged to bring to the attention of the people of the United States the content of the Paris agreement and the reality of Nixon-Thieu violations and non-compliance. One of the main themes of our visit was implementation of the agreement.

We found the Vietnamese united in the view that the agreement represents a tremendous victory in their struggle. At the same time they recognize that full implementation of the agreement will require great pressure calling for a continuation of international mobilization and support. They were particularly concerned because many progressive people throughout the world who in the past had provided them so much assistance have viewed the Paris agreement as ending the war.

Over and over it was and must be emphasized that the war in Vietnam is not over.

On numerous occasions we were told that the Paris agreement, because it respects the Vietnamese peoples' right of self-determination and recognizes the existence of the PRG, its territory and army in the South, is in harmony with the interests of the DRVN and the PRG, and it is therefore in their interest to have it fully implemented and enforced.

On the other hand, because the Thieu regime could not survive the full implementation and enforcement of the agreement — the release of all political prisoners and the extension of full democratic liberties would soon result in its overthrow — it is in the interest of Thieu's self-preservation and U.S. neocolonialism to sabotage the full implementation of the agreement.

We received information from the PRG delegate on ground fighting and bombings by the Saigon army in the South and their continuing operations against PRG territory. He emphasized to us that since early this year the United States has supplied Thieu with 300,000 tons of ammunition, 500 aircraft, mostly fighters, more than 600 tanks and armored cars, and that approximately 24,000 U.S. "civilian" advisers remain attached to the Saigon military efforts.

In addition, the Thieu regime has kept several hundred thousand people in political prisons and refugee concentration camps and has eliminated, rather than granted pursuant to the Paris agreement, the enjoyment of civil liberties in the areas under Saigon control.

For these reasons, it was stressed, the battle for full implementation and strict enforcement of the Paris agreement is a

firing line John Cool, Rick Dope

To the editor:

I was really fascinated by the list of approximately 450 names in the Jake Pickle advertisement in last Friday's Daily Texan (April 19). As in most big lists, I noticed the usual repetition of some names and the misspellings, and I am quite used to both.

I also noted quite an abundance of the sorority debutante and fraternity fop element, plus quite a few members of Young Republicans. I thought that Pickle was a Democrat? I was very surprised not to find Steve Van's name in the whole mess.

I did find the names of John Cool, Rick Dope and Cundy Know. They don't seem to be listed in my student directory, so they must have enrolled at midterm, or maybe they are night students or even high school students.

—Packee speaks

To the editor:

Among the many injustices that surround us is the fact that county judge candidate Hubert Gill is taking all the heat for the "packing" of the West Austin Demos endorsement meeting.

I was a "packee" at that meeting — along with many others — who came because we had been told Jake Pickle was trying to "pack" the meeting. After the outrageous sham endorsement of Pickle by Travis County Women's Political Caucus, there was reason to believe that Pickle would try to "pack" West Austin Demos. I sat in front of a group of "new" members for Pickle at that meeting.

Hubert Gill does not deserve all the blame for the sudden influx of "new" members at that meeting. If he had really packed the meeting to such a high degree, then the club would have endorsed him and would not have dually endorsed Gill and Weeks. I voted — along with many other "antiPickle packees" — to dually endorse.

So let's be fair to Hubert Gill — that meeting was "packed" to keep Jake Pickle from doing again what he did at the Women's Political Caucus. Let's try to dump on candidates and politicians only when they truly deserve it — that job alone will keep us plenty busy.

John Albach,
School of Law

Pick a pack

To the editor:

As an officer of the Travis County Democratic Party, I deeply regret that the background information I gave to Texan reporter Scott Tagliarino was used in an article which some construed to affect the candidacy of some candidates in the Democratic primary.

On two occasions I discussed with Scott the phenomenon known as "packing" political club meetings. On both occasions I indicated that this regrettable procedure is a common practice in local politics. In the specific case of the April 11 West Austin Democrats meeting, I believe no candidate can be properly singled out as more or less guilty of trying to "pack" that meeting.

It is my belief that the supporters of at least six candidates made some effort to pack, counterpack or counter-counterpack that meeting. I see no reason to condemn anyone involved simply because some were more successful than others.

In the race for U.S. Congress my publicly and privately stated position of neutrality remains unchanged.

So long as I am executive director of the Travis County Democratic Party I will not take an official position in the congressional race no matter what my private views or preferences may be. Because of rampant rumors to the contrary, I therefore would appreciate the publication of this letter.

Pickle's record less than consistent

By DAN ROBERTS
I have been reading with interest the political ads for J.J. (Jake) Pickle in The Texan and have come to the conclusion that the only thing really consistent about Jake is his inconsistency. I read the headline for one of Pickle's political ads in Friday's Texan. In big, bold type were the words "Jake Pickle has worked hard for students..." It seems that his concern for students miraculously appeared only after redistricting changed his constituency from rural to largely urban with 40,000 potential student votes. I wonder if all of the students who were listed in the ad as supporting him have bothered to check his voting record and House floor remarks.

Vietnam
In 1966, on the floor of the House of Representatives, Pickle labeled student dissenters of the Vietnam war a "militant minority of misfits..." headline hunting hoodlums who brazenly burn draftcards, demonstrating contempt for the country's courageous leadership." And later on defense of the resumption of bombing in 1966, Pickle stated "When public figures view with alarm, participate in appeasement talk, criticize their government and cast doubt... then those people are undermining the policy that made this country great..." "To me it has been a regrettable display of weakness to see some officials gain headlines simply because they feel a little heat from home, and they start retreating."

Once fellow Texan Lyndon Johnson left the presidency, however, and his personal obligation to support the war was weakened, Pickle reversed his former stand on the war by voting for a December, 1972, deadline for U.S. participation in the war. He did not, however, apologize for his prior position: he stating after that vote "I have not wanted to tie the President's hands."

Presidential power
A second political ad in Friday's Texan stated "Jake Pickle's concern for presidential abuse of power does not end with his support of the impeachment inquiry." One wonders if he was thinking of this concern when he avoided challenging executive branch power with regard to war-making authority by opposing a provision which would have prohibited the use of draftees in any war for more than 30 days with congressional approval. And he was not present when the House considered a requirement that the secretary of state furnish Congress with documents related to American intelligence operations in Laos. The proposal failed.

The environment
A third political article in Friday's Texan had the headlines "Pickle stresses protecting environment." In this article, Pickle is quoted as saying "We have made many steps toward protecting our environment in the past 10 years, and we cannot afford to lose any ground we have gained."

Here is another of Jake's unexplainable inconsistencies. He voted against the requirement that the "best available" water pollution control technology be utilized by 1981, against a proposal to end new stream channelization for one year (a practice which is killing the natural life in our dying rivers and streams), against a proposal giving the Environmental Protection Agency power to ban nonessential pesticides, against a proposal giving water pollution control standards and powers for the EPA and against the deletion of the SST.

On funding
Pickle's votes concerning appropriations and funding are marked with a curious mixup of priorities and, yes, more inconsistency. Pickle voted for the 1972 Department of Defense budget which was $1.5 billion over the budget of two years before. And he opposed proposals to cut this budget by 5 percent and as little as 2 percent. He also voted for the 1972 military research and development appropriation, 9 percent over the previous budget.

Pickle's domestic spending votes, however, are much more selective. He backed the creation of Medicare but supported an attempt to limit eligibility for free child care programs to families with $4,320 rather than $6,960 income. He also went along with a proposal to cut Social Security benefits for those receiving payments on account of black lung disease (coal production is, of course, increasing many fold because of the energy shortage). Pickle voted against $588 million in Urban Renewal, for the deletion of ethnic studies program and against unemployment compensation for migrant farm workers. This last vote is completely opposite from Pickle's June, 1972, stand on migratory workers when he criticized the Administration for failing to rebudget funds for Public Health Service hospitals, where migrant workers obtain health care.

By the way, Pickle voted against election of the President by direct vote, implying he doesn't want to put the presidency in the hands of a grossly misinformed public. Are you properly informed about Jake Pickle?

Inertia, untried dreams

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK
1974, The Washington Star Syndicate
WASHINGTON — It had been more than a year since I last talked with J. Gordon Vaeth, the dirigible man, but I found him one day last week at the Army-Navy Club. He was looking more than ever like the commander of Jules Verne's Nautilus — trim, gray-haired, dark-eyed — and he had bad news and good news.

First the bad news: private capitalism, so far as he knows, has not yet invested a hard nickel in revival of the airship. New the good news: some seed money is in sight from the government, and interest is soaring.
Vaeth is an old Navy type. He fell in love with lighter-than-air ships as a ground officer with Navy blimps in World War I. The love affair has never palled. He now is director of system engineering for the National Environmental Satellite Service, but he spends most of his spare time promoting the idea of building fleets of dirigibles to provide an entirely new form of worldwide freight and passenger transportation.

Good money, bad causes
My friend reminds me of the little old southern lady who was known to insist that General Lee never retreated. Well, she was asked, what about Lee at Appomattox? "Ah," she said stoutly, "he was only advancing to the rear."

In a sense, that is what Vaeth and his fellow enthusiasts have in mind. They perceive a need for a major breakthrough in transportation. At least $10 billion, here and abroad, recently were pumped into the supersonic transport plane. The SST was supposed to be a quantum jump into the future. It flopped. The idea of flying maybe 120 passengers and a few boxes of freight at 1,500 miles an hour proved unsalable. The airship visionaries look the other way: They dream of giant dirigibles that would fly maybe 500 passengers and 400,000 pounds of freight at 120 miles an hour.

NASA deals in
I last reported on this in February of 1973. Since then a lot has happened. Fortune magazine came forth with a stimulating piece last December. Vaeth himself appeared on the NBC Today show. A number of editorial writers seized upon the concept. In September the Navy and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration joined with Massachusetts Institute of Technology in a seminar on the subject. In January the respected American Institute for Aeronautics and Astronautics held a serious session on "The Helium Horse." Georgetown University has a seminar scheduled for this fall. Most significantly, NASA's budget for the next fiscal year will include perhaps $250,000 for preliminary feasibility studies.

No one really knows whether modern-day airships are in fact feasible. After the proponents' enthusiasm has been appropriately discounted, some tough questions plainly remain: Cost. Safety. Crew training. Prospective revenues. These are the questions bankers ask.
Vaeth is convinced that every such question can be answered affirmatively. The technology of metallurgy has made prodigious gains since the days of the Hindenburg. Weather hazards can now be detected and avoided. In today's world, concerned about energy, environment and underdeveloped nations, the airship offers advantages no other form of transportation can match.

A dream now
As Vaeth reasonably observes, dirigibles take off on their own silent gas. They can reach far into the interior of Africa or South America, and they can load and unload without monstrous concrete runways. Floating leisurely at low altitudes, they would provide luxurious cruise ships. Of greater economic importance, they could move tremendous quantities of freight — lettuce, perishable fruits, fresh vegetables and the like — from the West Coast to the East Coast in 36 hours.

Vaeth's favorite dream is of a giant airship, the "Spirit of America," or the "Spirit of '76," built as a bicentennial symbol of the imagination and boldness of the United States. Throughout the bicentennial period, it would make its friendly presence known in state visits, mercy missions and disaster relief around the world. It is a captivating dream. What it needs, right now, is money.

Moore Hall Takes Softball Title

By LARRY SMITH
Texan Staff Writer

It took them two innings, but Moore Hall finally took advantage of a gift from Akala's softball team to become the Class "A" men's softball champion Tuesday night.

Before Moore Hall's 14-12 victory, AIME (American Institute of Mining, Metallurgy and Petroleum Engineers) downed Zeta Beta Tau, 16-12, for the Class "B" championship, and Jump, an independent team, behind the pitching of Wally Standish defeated Alpha Tau Omega in the Class "A" consolation game.

EARLIER in the day, two squads from Sigma Alpha Epsilon met for the mullet championship with "Sleep and Eat" outlasting the Mighty Mullets, 4-2.

Akala's gift came in the seventh and last scheduled inning. With two outs and his team trailing by four, Moore Hall pitcher Bill Kemp hit a slow roller to the shortstop, who lobbed the ball to the second baseman Craig Litton for what appeared to be the final out. But the ball popped out of Litton's glove to load the bases.

They remained loaded after John Hayes walked to force in Moore Hall's ninth run. Bill Comeaux's triple scored three runs to tie the game, 12-12.

AKALA was unable to score in the bottom of the seventh. In the ninth, Moore Hall's lead-off batter, Mike Shaub, reached first on an error but was removed from the bases when Kemp hit into a fielder's choice. Kemp scored on Hayes' grounder past the pitcher. Moore Hall took a two-run lead when an error on Comeaux's ground ball allowed Hayes to score. Kemp then retired Akala in the last half of the ninth with only one hit. "THIS WAS definitely the hardest game we've played all year," said Kemp, a junior in electrical engineering. "We made a lot of errors at the first of the game. I'm just glad we won it and it's over with."

Bucks Win West

CHICAGO (AP) — Veteran Oscar Robertson ignited a furious Milwaukee rally in the third quarter, and the Bucks smothered the Chicago Bulls 115-99 Monday night to score a four-game sweep of their National Basketball Association Western Conference final series.

Scoreless in the first half, Robertson pumped in 16 last-half points to go with Kareem Abdul-Jabbar's 38 points and carry the Bucks into the NBA championship showdown between the winner of the current Boston Celtics-New York Knicks Eastern Conference final series.

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Indiana Pacers rode a combined 58-point performance by Mel Daniels and George McGinnis to a 110-101 victory over the Utah Stars Monday and remained alive in the American Basketball Association's Western Division Championship playoff series.

The two Indiana big men scored 29 points each to spark the victory, which trimmed the Stars' lead to 3-2 in the best-of-seven series. Indiana once trailed 3-0.

The series continues Thursday with game six in Terre House, Ind. The seventh game, if necessary, will be played Saturday night in Salt Lake City.

Cedeno Leads Astros

HOUSTON (UPI) — Slugger Cesar Cedeno, his 13-game hitting streak broken this weekend, drove in five runs by lining two homers over the left and centerfield fences, to help Houston Astros pitcher

Claude Osteen to his third win of the season, 7-0 over the Atlanta Braves Monday night. Cedeno's blasts, his third and fourth this season, came two innings apart, off starter and loser Roric Harrison.

In the fifth, after Roger Metzger drove in the Astros' second run with a single, Cedeno hit a two-run blast. Then in the seventh, Cedeno lined Harrison's pitch over the centerfield wall and scored behind Greg Gross and Metzger. Cedeno now leads the majors with 23 RBIs.

richard justice

Some strange things have happened to Texas pitcher Richard Wortham this season. Last year, Wortham was a remarkable 10-0, including a victory over Oklahoma in the College World Series.

But this season, Wortham is only 6-2, Texas as a team is 42-3. So it is apparent that Wortham has not performed up to expectations.

"It's strange, because last fall was the best I've pitched since I've been here," Wortham said. "In November, I went to pitch in the World Baseball League in South America and did all right."

"The week after we got back this spring, I was running under (Trainer Frank) Medina," Wortham said. "I guess that takes a lot out of you. Anyway, I went to a party one night and got soaking wet. The next day I went into the hospital."

Frightening

Wortham was in the hospital for a week, and his weight dropped from 190 to 175. "When I got out, I was real skinny," he recalled. "It was scary to look at myself in the mirror." And it must have been scary for Texas Coach Cliff Gustafson to watch Wortham's fastball, because it was not as fast as it used to be.

Wortham's injury is just one of many to the Texas pitching staff this season. First, Zane Grubbs flunked out of school. Then Martin Flores had elbow problems, the worst kind of injury for a pitcher. A little later, Rick Burley was weakened by the flu.

"This has been a really weird year," Wortham said. "Burley was in the hospital for a couple of days. He's had a good year, but in a way it could have been better."

However, none of the injured pitchers were counted on as heavily as Wortham. He has not recovered rapidly. It's not because he didn't try, though. In fact, he tried too hard.

"A week after I got out of the hospital I went back to work," the sophomore lefthander said. "The doctor said take it slow, but I didn't. I think it was just getting my legs back in shape."

If your legs hold up through nine (innings), your arm usually will. I feel a lot more comfortable now with my fast-ball and my curve. I'm also getting my change-up over a lot better.

"A lot of my problems have been mental. If you think you can pitch, you have a head start. I'm just going to ride this season out and hope we can win the conference."

Wortham can't help but wonder where he would be now if he had decided to turn pro when he graduated from Odessa High School — instead of coming to Texas. He, or rather his father, turned down a $60,000 bonus from the Texas Rangers.

"My dad had already told the scouts that I was going to school," he said. "You know you can't play baseball all your life. You have to have something to fall back on."

This summer Wortham will have something to fall back on that he does not have now: a pitching coach. It is ironic that Texas does not have a pitching coach. Pitching is at least 70 percent of baseball. The Texas football team has a receiver coach. And what percentage is receiving passes in the Texas football program?

"The coach in Colorado where we play is a Kansas City scout," Wortham said. "Last summer he really helped me a lot. He tells you what you are doing wrong and how he wants you to do it. Now, the only person that can really help me is Jim (Gideon). He played up there with me, and we both know what he wanted us to do. I can't wait to get back there."

Turning Pro

At the end of next season, his third at the University, Wortham will turn pro. He will probably be one of several Texas players to pass up their final year of eligibility. Wortham feels the experience at Texas is equivalent to high minor league baseball.

"Last year, I saw Wichita's triple A team play, and they were terrible," he said. "I think we could beat them. I think we're consistently as good as most double A teams."

And like most Texas baseball players, Wortham is thinking about winning more than the SWC championship. "If the pitching comes around to be as good as the hitting," he said, "we'll be real tough." He thinks it will be strange if the pitching doesn't come around.

Austin Offers Fishing Variety

By KELLEY ANDERSON
Texan Staff Writer

Fishermen angling in Town Lake may soon be hooking a different species of fish than expected — northern pike — compliments of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

The addition of 30,000 northern pike fingerlings to Town Lake is part of a comprehensive program that the department has established over the last couple of years to introduce exotic fishes into state public reservoirs.

"We're trying, by introducing new species of fish into the Town Lake area, to have the potential for a lot of recreation for the people who live in the urban area," said David Pritchard, assistant chief of fisheries, Parks and Wildlife Department.

LAKE LBJ was stocked with walleye pike last year, while Lake Travis was stocked with striped bass. Pritchard said these fish will "supplement, instead of competing with our native sport fish."

Pritchard said Lake Austin has not been stocked with any fish because the fish there are migratory and move to different lakes. "We're stocking into key areas where these fish have a better chance of surviving initially, growing and establishing a reproducing population."

The walleye and northern pike add to the already wide variety of fish found in area lakes. There are also white, black, spotted and striped bass, catfish, carp, perch, Atlantic croaker and rainbow trout.

On Lake Travis, the Highland Lakes Marina offers fishing under lights. "There are no definite hours," said Mrs. Carter. "Most fishing is done during the night, under the lights."

ADMISSION to fish all day at the marina dock is $1. Cane poles for children rent for 25 cents per day, with casting-type poles for adults at $1 a day.

For the fisherman who wishes to venture out on the lake to fish, small boats can be rented. Fourteen-foot Lone Star fishing boats (motorless) rent for $5 per day. The same boat with a 9½ horsepower motor rents for $20 a day.

BAIT is usually not too expensive. At most places in the area, a box of nightcrawler worms costs 70 to 75 cents, and a dozen shad or minnows can cost 75 cents or more.

Almost all college students who desire to fish with a rod and reel combination are confronted with another cost if they want to fish legally — a fishing license.

Licenses are required by the state for those between the ages of 16 and 65 who desire to fish with some sort of lining device.

FINES FOR fishing without a license can go as high as $200.

For those fishermen who want to join a fishing club, there are many in the area. Two Austin-based clubs, Capitol Bass Club and Austin Bass Club, have memberships open to the public.

The clubs compete in tournaments approximately once a month. In each tournament trophies are awarded for the heaviest fish and for the group of fish (limit of 10) weighing the most.

These clubs also offer instruction for novice fishermen. "We get lots of guys who couldn't fish at all, now they're pretty darn good," said Jackie Hewlett, a member of both clubs.

Texas Golfers Leading SWC

By BRIAN BLAKELEY
Texan Staff Writer

HOUSTON — Texas golfers turned in poor scores for the first 27 holes of the Southwest Conference Golf Tournament here Monday but still found themselves leading the field by six strokes over favored University of Houston.

"It's a hard course, and nobody's playing well," said Jim Mason, who led the Longhorns with a 108 after 27 holes. "But we're in the lead, and it's better than losing."

Fatigue, as well as a difficult course, helped to keep the scores high. All eight conference teams finished playing the 72-hole All-America Intercollegiate at Atascocita Country Club here Saturday and began practicing Sunday at Bear Creek Country Club for the SWC competition.

Some players also were hampered by afternoon rain showers and wind. Senior Tony Pfaff got caught in the rain and came in at 118.

Randy Simmons fired a 110 for the Longhorns and was followed by Johnny Dill at 114. Bob Mase also had a 118.

Texas' team total was 450, and Houston came in at 456. Texas Tech was third with 461, followed by SMU at 464.

Texas A&M was one back with 465 and Rice had 481. TCU finished the day with 487, Baylor with 488 and Arkansas with 504.

Houston finished the All-America tournament at Atascocita 13 strokes ahead of SMU, the closest SWC team, and is the SWC tournament favorite.

"I'm sure they (Houston) will be playing better tomorrow," said Mason. "But so will we." The tournament's remaining 27 holes will be played Tuesday.

Nelson Proceeds To Quarterfinals

HOUSTON — After two rounds of play in the Southwest Conference tennis tournament at Rice, the Longhorns have one singles and two doubles teams still remaining.

Captain Dan Nelson on the basis of his two wins Monday advances to the quarterfinals on Tuesday when he will meet Texas A&M's Bill Hoover.

Hoover beat the Longhorns' Stewart Keller last weekend in a dual match and then defeated No. 3 seed Lee Merry of Houston Monday.

The doubles teams of Keller and Brad Nabers and Nelson and Graham Whaling also will play Tuesday. Nelson and Whaling will continue their preliminary match which was halted by rain Monday, and Keller and Nabers will play in the quarterfinals.

The quarterfinals and semifinals are scheduled for Tuesday with the finals in the singles slated for 10 a.m. Wednesday and the finals in the doubles at 1 p.m.

Texas was unfortunate in the draw and was forced to play some of the SWC's top players in the opening rounds.

Top seeded George Hardie of SMU defeated Texas' Keller, 6-7, 6-1, 6-2 and No. 2 seed Ross Walker from Houston defeated Texas' Bill Fisher, 6-4, 6-2.

Fourth seeded Bob Ogle from Houston overslept and forfeited his first round match and was eliminated.

'Beetleboards' Ads Getting Buggier

By NORMA CAVAZOS
Those brightly decorated Volkswagens whose sides proclaim Clairol's Herbal Essence Shampoo is a "garden of earthly delights" are not the work of a loyal shampoo user, but the latest idea from a California advertising agency called Beetleboards of America, Inc. Beetleboards are student-owned Volkswagens painted and decaled to advertise a commercial product.

The agency says Beetleboards are being driven on more than 100 campuses throughout the country.

ALL THAT IS necessary to participate is a VW in working order, a good driving record and insurance. If both car and driver qualify, the car is given a free paint job and decaled according to the advertiser's instructions.

The owner is paid $20 each month of the campaign for driving the car as usual and keeping the decals in good condition.

Beetleboards, Inc., boast theirs is the "only form of advertising that gets 30 miles to the gallon."

Steve Howeth, one of six University students whose VW was turned into a Clairol Beetleboard last January, said there definitely are advantages to driving billboards.

"THE IDEA of a mobile billboard is a good concept. It's a practical alternative to the stationary billboards that clutter up the roadside," he said Monday.

However, Howeth admits monetary, not ecological, reasons convinced him to apply to Beetleboards, Inc. last December.

"It was the money — the idea of a $20 check each month," he explained.

THE FREE PAINT job was what convinced University student Mary Blake to turn her VW into a Beetleboard.

"I really love my car and I wanted to do something nice for it," she said.

Beetleboards, Inc.'s claim their cars never get stolen (they may be a little too conspicuous), their drivers never lose their cars in parking lots and the cars generally attract large crowds wherever they go. Yet Ms. Blake said her car has never gotten any notable reactions.

BOBBIE BURDEN, another University student Beetleboard owner, agreed. "Everyone just stares and points. It's amazing the amount of people that think I painted it myself or had it painted because I liked the shampoo," she said.

The Clairol campaign will end in June. The Beetleboard drivers agreed the next product would determine whether they would participate in another campaign.

"I'd do it again if the product was one I believed in," Ms. Burden said. The Clairol campaign will be the last for Howeth, though. "I won't do another one. The paint job they gave my car was pretty bad. When they pull the decals off in June, I'm going to be left with a spotted car."

Bed Misconceptions Inundating Society

By VIRGINIA TIMMONS
Texan Staff Writer

Waterbeds — the latest innovation in bedroom furniture — have been on the market for about five years, and many myths have grown up about them, said Jim Brewer of Waterbed Systems International.

Brewer, who had five beds on display recently at Dobie Mall, has two stores in Dallas and came to Austin to educate people and attempt to dispel some of the myths of the waterbed.

"Most people believe that they either leak or will burst," he said.

A WATERBED, which weighs on the average of 1,800 pounds, can not leak because it is protected by a liner made of 20 mil plastic, he said.

"Another misconception of the waterbed," he said "is that they may burst, but that is impossible due to equal amount of distribution of the water."

"Many apartment managers don't allow waterbeds mainly because they don't understand the principles of them."

"The only problem that I can see with them is that they're so hard to get out of in the morning!" he said.

BREWER, WHO has been in the waterbed business for about three years, plans to open another shop in Dallas. He sells about eight different styles of waterbed furniture.

They range from fully upholstered to four-postered to the simple wooden ones.

The beds come in all shapes and sizes, ranging from octagonal to round to double to twin.

"Waterbeds are also cheaper than the conventional beds on a comparable level," Brewer said. "But the problem is getting the American people to accept them. They are actually better for you to sleep on than regular beds."

"When you lie upon the bed, the water supports your weight without pressure against the mattress. It's more natural; the waterbed molds to the contours of your body, regardless of your weight," he noted.

Brewer also said complete waterbed sets can be purchased in Austin. This includes the mattress, frame, heating system and safety liner. Brewer shows his beds in "nice furniture," some with fur covers, hoping people will look at them and find out the facts about them.

One waterbed owner asked him about cats clawing at the bubbles. "Always keep your bed covered," he replied.

He also added that kits were available to patch up a small hole.

Whether every home will have a waterbed in the future is not certain, but Brewer hopes people will become educated about the advantages of waterbeds, thus disproving the myths.

Financial Trends Of Cities Viewed

By LAURA McDONOUGH

Participants at the 20th Governmental Accounting and Finance Institute, a statewide meeting of city finance officers, listened to an overview of trends and problems in municipal finance Monday from the president of the Municipal Finance Officers Association of the United States and Canada.

John M. Urie said he detects a trend away from "performance budgeting" in municipal finance. City finance officers who tried to implement performance budgeting found they were doing a lot of work for limited results, he said.

THE NEW approach, "budgeting by objective," will "make the budget easier for council members and the general public to understand" and will give better direction to city government, he said.

Urie, who is the director of finance of Kansas City, Mo., said city bond issues will be "rather costly" since interest rates on borrowed money are higher than ever before.

He also noted federal revenue sharing grants to cities have been a mixed blessing. Since the open-ended grants came into existence three years ago, categorical grants (for specific objectives in cities) had been either curtailed or discontinued.

THE NET result has been a reduction in the amount of monies we have received" from federal sources, he said.

The rapidly-changing municipal finance situation necessitates frequent re-education. Urie said officers should spend additional time reading outside publications to keep up on current developments.

"You're going to have to avail yourselves of more education and training, and you're going to have to adjust yourselves to accepting some variables relating to things that you previously thought were basic tenets of our society," Urie said.

The institute is being sponsored by the Lyndon Baines Johnson School of Public Affairs and the College of Business Administration, the Texas chapter of the Municipal Finance Officers Association and the Texas Municipal League. Meetings will continue through Tuesday at the Joe C. Thompson Conference Center.

DWI Penalty Nets Trip to Huntsville

By BILL GARLAND
Texan Staff Writer

After receiving a term of one year in Travis County Jail for driving while intoxicated, Philippe Rosales last week unexpectedly took a bus ride with 23 other prisoners to the "joint," as sheriff's officers call state prison in Huntsville.

Rosales' misplacement went undiscovered for almost a week, until a daughter asked to see her father in County Jail on the first regular visiting day.

Friday, the 60-year-old prisoner returned to Austin and took a position as trustee, to help with chores around the jail.

Although Rosales refused to talk with reporters Monday ("or even to a lawyer," a deputy said), his son Felix, said plans are under consideration for legal action against the responsible authority.

"They didn't forget his mistake for getting drunk on beer. Why should we forget their mistake," said the younger Rosales.

Sheriff Raymond Frank said the mistake probably occurred when someone in the district clerk's office filled out the wrong form for Rosales' penalty.

Such a mistake is almost impossible not to be caught somewhere down the line, Frank said.

Felix Rosales mainly objected to his father having to go through what he termed a "diagnostic center," preparatory to the Huntsville trip.

"I think my old man is too old to go through something like that. They shave you, strip you, make you go through hell, really," Rosales said.

"My old man told them,

"You are making a mistake." They told him to "Shut up, Mexican," he added.

"I don't think anyone should be called a 'dumb Mexican' just because he's fighting for his rights. Those days are gone," said Navel Garcia, a friend of the family.

Frank said if the prisoner received such treatment, it must have come from members of the Texas Department of Corrections.

Traffic Fatalities On the Increase

The Texas traffic death rate, while still below last year's, is rising slowly as people begin believing "there is no energy crisis," a Department of Public Safety (DPS) official said Monday.

Jim Robinson, DPS public information official, said the 27 percent decrease in fatalities over April, 1973, is directly attributable to lower speed limits and reduced driving. But that decrease is eroding at a rate of 1 percent a week, he said.

"At the height of the fuel shortage in March, when people were keeping their gas consumption and their speed of travel low, we had as much as a 31 percent decrease,"

Robinson said.

When the Arab oil embargo was lifted in March and "the government began to downplay the very real energy shortage," more traffic fatalities were recorded and 109 percent more speeding tickets were issued, Robinson said.

School Offers Study Abroad

By LIZ SWEET

The Experiment in International Living's School for International Training in Brattleboro, Vt., is providing students an opportunity for a semester's study abroad.

Spring and fall semester programs in 16 countries are available to sophomores, juniors and seniors. Students may choose from nine programs, including arts and crafts, English instruction, photography and urban action.

RON BERNELL, a senior English major and former participant in the program, said most of the programs include a one-month homestay with a foreign family, contemporary culture seminars or specialized field study and individual independent study.

The programs are available on five continents, including a 150-mile trip from eastern Nepal to Katmandu, a three-month homestay with Cakchiquel Indian families in Guatemala or community work projects in Ghana.

Programs also are available in Yugoslavia, Spain, Mexico, Japan, Italy, Ireland, Greece, India, Germany, France, England and Denmark.

STUDENTS WHO are interested in the program may also enroll in either of two three-week intensive language courses. The intensive language courses are scheduled for July and August on the International School's campus in Brattleboro.

Bernell spent two months in Spain as part of the school's Summer Abroad program. Before his trip Bernell also completed the school's intensive language study in Spanish.

While in Spain, Bernell lived for six weeks with a family that spoke no English.

Bernell believes the experience provided him with an opportunity to "meet a new culture and learn a language."

"IT WAS AN emotional experience which I will remember all my life."

Students may receive college credit for the program. Scholarships are available through the school.

Those interested in enrolling in the program should write the School for International Training, 31 Kipling Road, Brattleboro, Vt. 05301.

Black Poet Geary Awareness Stressed

By ROBERT FULKERSON
Texan Staff Writer

Elton Geary, black author and poet, draws upon his own life experiences to make black people aware of their problems.

Speaking in the Union Building Monday, Geary, a former college student, Army captain in Vietnam and instructor at Texas Lutheran College at Seguin, read his poems about life and love, emotions, the inner city and rural Texas. His poems reflect one black man's existence in the Southwest.

Awareness is a dominant theme in his poetry. The black man's survival depends upon awareness, he said.

"It's very important to examine yourself and the world around you to be sure you're not being shortchanged."

Reading from his first book of poems, "Reflections of a Black Man," published in 1970, Geary recited political works concerning blacks.

"The black man has a dream," Geary said.

"We must look at our dreams and face the hard reality that perhaps it's going to be a rough, rough road."

The past is important to the present and future, he said. Relating his upbringing in a run-down house in Tampa, Fla., Geary reminded the audience that blacks still live in substandard housing.

"We've seen the road was rocky then, but we've survived, and survival is the key," he said.

The survival theme appears again in "Black Beast," written in 1959, before the civil rights struggle began.

"A beast of a man, so the South say, all because his rights were taken away. Joy spells seem never to ring of a peace, peace so dear, fight on black beast, your work can never cease..." he wrote.

Blacks must become aware of what is hurting them, he said, and discovering their problems will help them survive in this society.

Pickle Headquarters Hit By Weekend Burglary

Sometime during the weekend, U.S. Rep. J.J. "Jake" Pickle's campaign headquarters was burglarized and $400 to $500 in cash, nearly $3,000 in checks and "certain financial lists" were taken.

The burglar or burglars took a file-size strong box to the rear of the office below the headquarters at 1009 W. Sixth St. and pried it open, a spokesman for the campaign committee said.

Leaving the investigation to the Austin Police Department, the campaign committee "will not interfere with theories or speculations" about the reason for the burglary, the spokesman added.

The police burglary division had no developments to report.

Blood Drive Enters 6th Year

By MARY BARNES
Texan Staff Writer

The University community is being asked for the sixth time to give the gift of life — blood — for Texas hemophiliacs in a drive that is combining friendly competition with humanitarian interests.

This year's goal is to recapitulate the national lead with a minimum of 3,000 pints.

THE UNIVERSITY Blood Drive, sponsored by the Student Health Center, operates under a coordinating committee with representatives of Alpha Phi Omega, national men's service fraternity;

GDE, a University women's service organization; Spooks, honorary women's spirit and service group; and Alpha Epsilon Delta, premed/premed society.

In addition to the drawing in the Union Building Main Ballroom from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Thursday, several mobile drawing stations will be provided in association with competitions around campus.

A Jester station will operate in the center's first floor cafeteria for its residents and those of men's residence halls starting at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday.

A GREEK drive will be held in the Castilian's Seville

Room, and a Dobie station will be set up in the Dobie Dining Commons at 7:30 and 8 p.m. Wednesday respectively. A women's residence hall station has been arranged to complete the drive in Kinsolving Dormitory's study area at 7 p.m. Thursday.

Prizes will be awarded for all the competitions.

In a more serious vein than the competitions, a three-way "help" program is part of this year's University drive.

First, the blood is given to the Texas Hemophilia Association to help alleviate the financial burden suffered by families with a hemophiliac, whose blood bill may approach $25,000 annually.

NEXT, THE clotting factor is removed from the donated blood and sent to Texas hemophiliacs.

The remaining whole blood is distributed to hospitals. People with normal blood do not need the extra clotting factor which has been removed.

Finally, a security plan offers blood replacement for all students, faculty and staff, and for the families of donors.

Cotten Shines in 'Debutante'

"The Reluctant Debutante," by William Douglas Home; directed by Michael J. Frank; starring Joseph Cotten and Patricia Medina; playing at the Country Dinner Playhouse (CDP) through May 12.

By DEBRA TRIPLETT
Texan Staff Writer

When a stage and screen personality with numerous credits to his name walks onstage for the first time during a performance, the audience often will applaud.

They applaud not so much because they like his entrance, but because they respect his accomplishments, his professional standing and his presence.

Joseph Cotten receives such applause when he comes on stage in the "Reluctant Debutante" and he does his damndest to live up to his audience's expectations. And he succeeds.

RELUCTANT DEBUTANTE opens its first act with a less than enthusiastic audience response. The highlight of the act is Cotten's first appearance on stage, when the audience generally explodes into applause at its first view of a known star.

The slow audience response in the first act is not a result of the performer's comedic inability. Rather, the first act functionally, though perhaps dully, serves to set up the situation, give background for the coming acts and provide the reference for future punchlines.

Very little can be done to make background scenes interesting, but Patricia Medina (Cotten's real life wife) does her best by floundering about as a society matron, making hilarious phone calls and mixing up her "young men."

ACTS II AND III quicken the action, allowing the audience to join in the fun. The audience enjoys the slapstick touches introduced by David Bullock's (Philip Weaver) entrance over the more sophisticated innuendos of Act I. With the addition of Jane's (Anita Frazier) quick wit and humor, these two acts really make the production shine. Add the professionalism of Miss Medina and Cotten and there is a real CDP package.

Other supporting actresses who help move the play along smoothly are Mabel Crosswaithe (Sheena Gordon) and her daughter Clarissa (Jenny Burgess). These women typify society matrons who pull petty but laughable tricks on other society matrons.

Roughly, the plot follows the entrance of a most reluctant debutante into London society. Her mother, Sheila Broadbent (Miss Medina), pushes every aspect of society and every young man she feels is acceptable to society on her daughter.

But the young men (more accurately, one young man) acceptable to Mrs. Broadbent are not quite what her daughter has in mind, and their differing tastes provide the play's basis for merri-ment.

After the play, Cotten spoke briefly about his feelings on the American Film Theatre (AFT) concept. He thinks it is a "marvelous opportunity" for people who do not see the plays on tour to view great theatrical works.

Ricci To Play Tonight

Ruggiero Ricci, a violin virtuoso of world renown, will perform at Hogg Auditorium Tuesday night as part of the University Solo Artist Series.

The 8 p.m. concert is sponsored by the Department of Music and the Cultural Entertainment Committee.

Ricci's program will include Sonata No. 3 in D minor and Op. 108 by Brahms; Bartok's Sonata for Solo Violin; Sonata No. 3 in G minor by Debussy; and Six Caprices by Paganini, with whom Ricci has often been compared.

Born in San Francisco where he made his debut at the age of 8, Ricci has become a truly international concert artist. He has made three world tours, three tours each of Russia and Australia, four of South Africa and nine of South America, as well as annual tours of the United States and Europe.

Ricci has made numerous recordings on the London, Columbia and Decca labels. A number of his recordings of Paganini's work are the only versions available on record of the Italian master's music.

In concert, Ricci performs on a 1734 Guarneri, one of the best instruments of the Cremona school.

The Los Angeles Times said the violinist "played with dash and fire and authoritative conviction, a tone of slashing brilliance, an effortless and indomitable technique and a wealth of temperament to make sparks fly."

Admission to Ricci's performance is by season ticket or the optional services fee. Remaining tickets will be sold to the public at the door beginning at 7 p.m. for $3.50 per seat.

Union To Sell Art

The Texas Union will sponsor a sale of original graphic art by contemporary and old master artists Thursday and Friday in the Union Building Main Gallery.

Arranged by the Ferdinand Roten Galleries of Baltimore, the exhibition will be on display from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. Thursday and from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday.

The original prints — prints taken directly from the artist's original woodcut, engraving, etching, silkscreen or lithograph — will include works by artists such as Picasso, Chagall, Miro, Dali, Renoir, Kollwitz and others, including contemporary American, European and Japanese printmakers. Prices for the prints start at $5 with the majority selling for under $100.

A representative of the Roten Galleries will be at the Main Gallery during the exhibit to answer questions about graphic art and printmaking.

Established in 1932, the Roten Galleries, which own one of the country's largest collections of graphic art, specialize in arranging exhibition sales at colleges, museums, art centers and galleries around the United States and Canada.

The Texas Union has sponsored graphic sales from the gallery for six years and will hold two more this year, one in the summer and one in the fall.

The Roten exhibition and sale has been popular in the past, according to Hal Weiner, Union program adviser because "it allows almost everyone to buy original graphic art at relatively low prices."

Duo Controversial But Excellent

By KEN McHAM
Texan Staff Writer

"You from the press? — All the way back to the last Winnebago."

It was a long way back to the fifth and largest Winnebago past the catered buffet in the barns behind City Coliseum Monday night.

It's been an even longer trip for Jimmy Seals and Dash Crofts, who spread the buffet, talked to reporters in the Winnebago and hopped into and out of Austin on their private Convair DC-9, leaving behind an excellent and controversial concert.

Seals and Crofts have been together since junior high school. They first rose to fame as members of the Champs, whose hit "Tequila" sold six million copies. Starting at about age 14, they stayed with the Champs for seven years, says Seals, including nine months of one-nighters on the road.

"We were the drivers, workies and musicians," Seals said in a press conference before Monday's concert. "We used to nail a broomstick to the stage and tie a mike on it and that was our stage."

Seals and Crofts are now about 31 years old. Their lyrics are somewhat more complex than "Tequila" and more visionary. The controversial exception to that rule, in the eyes of many supporters of women's rights, is "The Unborn Child," the title song of their new album.

Oh tiny bud that grows in the womb/ Only to be crushed before you can bloom/ Momma stop! Turn around, go back, think it over/ Think of all the great ones who gave everything/ That we might have life here/ So please bear the pain.

The lyrics were written by Crofts' sister-in-law after she watched a television special on abortion. It was introduced at the concert by Seals, who said:

"If I were a businessman making a big deal, I'd hire lawyers and accountants to go out and gather all the information they could before I made the decision. We think life deserves to have information gathered about it, too, and we hope that this song will give that information to a mother contemplating an abortion."

Seals and Crofts stand on abortion stems from their seven-year association with the Baha'i Faith, which holds that life begins with conception. The controversy follows them. In Dallas recently, women's organizations in the high schools boycotted the concert, hurting ticket sales considerably.

No such organization was evident in the large and predominantly high school and female audience Monday night. The audience stood and screamed when the stars hit the stage and responded in that key throughout the evening.

It was the music, not the politics and not the religion, which justified the response.

Seals and Crofts, with an extraordinary band and lead act — Walter Heath, played some of the finest music I've heard in Austin.

Seals' versatility was astounding. Adept at the guitar and sax, when he picked up his fiddle he kept the audience on its feet for the last five numbers. It was a move the audience should have made much sooner.

Tuesday night a special drama will be presented on the GE Theater at 8:30 p.m. on channel 7. "Larry," starring Frederic Forrest, Tyne Daly and Michael McGuire, is based on a true case history by Dr. Robert McQueen, professor of Psychology at the University of Nevada.

The story concerns a 26-year-old man who had been institutionalized since infancy as mentally retarded even though he actually was of normal intelligence.

"Unlike the 'Best of the New York Erotic Film Festival' ... the majority of pictures in this group are both erotic and amusing ...

"The one to wait for, without a doubt, is 'Apple Knockers and Coke', a short stag film made around 1948 with a very young, very object-looking Marilyn Monroe. She walks in front of the camera, sits down beneath a fake tree and commences a slow strip-tease, later rolling an apple up and down the famous torso and sipping a coke."

Your first tampon should be a Kotex tampon.

Because only Kotex tampons have soft, rounded ends ... gentle insertion guides ... instead of two bulky tubes ... and more protection than the leading brand. But the only way to be convinced is to let a Kotex tampon be your first one.

If it wasn't, here's a second chance.

NO EXIT

Tonight 8 p.m.

Based on the play by Jean-Paul Sartre with Viveca Lindfors and Rita Gam. Ben Piazza

Sartre's famous play presents an unusual vision of Hell. Three people doomed to spend eternity together in a single room. Ted Danielsen has freely adapted Sartre's play for the screen. After an out-of-competition screening at the 1962 Berlin Film Festival, NO EXIT won the Best Design award for both female leads, Viveca Lindfors and Rita Gam. This marked the first time the coveted award was given to two women.

"Impressive filming...Effective on stage, 'No Exit' has been extended by an imaginative camera to an even more effective experience of conscience. A movie of ideas...induces an emotional participation that does not displace but verifies the content. Much of the force of the film is due to Ted Danielsen's direction and the camera work of Ricardo Yonnis. The performance must be credited too, particularly that of Miss Lindfors."

Paper Products Hard To Get, Reports UT Supply Manager

By COLLEEN DOOLIN, Texan Staff Writer

Stocks of paper for University offices have not reached a critically low level, although suppliers are having their difficulties obtaining certain paper items, the University office supply manager said Monday.

Ford Urges Nixon To Comply With Impeachment Probe

NEW YORK (AP) — Vice-President Gerald R. Ford said Monday he would have pushed the Watergate investigation harder if he had been in the White House when the scandals first broke.

In a question-and-answer session at the annual meeting of The Associated Press, Ford also called on President Nixon to "do anything reasonable" to clear up the Watergate controversy, including maximum cooperation with the House Judiciary Committee's impeachment probe.

Ford said he hoped Nixon would, within the next 72 hours, turn over the relevant material asked by the committee from the White House.

A SUBPOENA issued by the committee seeking tapes and documents from the White House falls due Thursday morning.

In response to a question about what he would have done if he had been president at the time Watergate broke, Ford said Nixon obviously was not kept properly informed by his subordinates and that he — Ford — would have demanded better information.

"Whether there should have been a more vigorous prosecution of all the details, that's a matter of judgment," Ford said of the White House investigation. "In my judgment, I would have given a sort of nudge to my employees as hard as I possibly could."

"Some of the people who should have known obviously did not give him the whole story."

FORD SAID neither he nor Nixon knew anything about the burglary and bugging of Democratic Party headquarters in Washington's Watergate complex during the 1972 presidential election campaign but had discussed the ramifications of the case frequently.

"I have indicated to him on a number of occasions that I thought he should do anything reasonable in order to clear up the problems that have developed subsequent to Watergate itself," Ford said.

"I have consistently said the sooner any and all relevant evidence was made available, the better the Congress could consider, and the American people evaluate, whether or not he was involved prior to, at the time of, or subsequent" to the Watergate break-in, Ford said.

"I hope and trust that some time in the next 48 to 72 hours, the White House will cooperate to the maximum in making available to the House Committee on the Judiciary the relevant material that the committee has requested," Ford said.

THE COMMITTEE'S subpoena seeks tapes and documents covering 42 White House conversations in connection with its Watergate impeachment probe. The White House has indicated it will turn over what it considers "relevant."

While Ford urged maximum cooperation, he retained the White House language stressing "relevant" material. Committee Chairman Peter Rodino, D-N.J., has said anything short of full compliance with the subpoena might be taken as a ground for impeachment.

"In my judgment, the President is innocent of charges based on the definition of impeachment as it is written in to the Constitution," Ford said.

The Vice-President said he based this belief on conversations with Senate minority leader Hugh Scott, R-Pa., and others who have heard White House tapes, and on news reports.

Ford reiterated, however, that he had "scrupulously avoided" the opportunity offered by Nixon to listen to the tapes or read transcripts of them, for fear of compromising the disinterest of the man who would succeed Nixon if the President leaves office.

FORD SPOKE to about 1,300 newspaper and broadcast industry leaders at the luncheon session in the Waldorf-Astoria hotel. After brief introductory remarks, he spent about 20 minutes answering questions from the audience.

"I have no intention of being a candidate for any political office in 1976," Ford said, adding that he sometimes wished he "was plain old Jerry Ford of Michigan again."

Ford was a veteran member of Congress and House Republican leader before Nixon picked him to succeed Spiro T. Agnew as vice-president. Ford said he finds the job challenging enough to make it interesting, "but I wouldn't go back and run again."

Asked about inflation, he derided a proposed tax cut as a "superficial quick fix," like, the Vice-President said, the old wage and price controls.

Ford addresses AP meeting.

Last of Witnesses Testify In Mitchell-Stans Hearing

NEW YORK (AP) — A government witness testified Monday that former Attorney General John N. Mitchell had an opportunity to tell a Republican aide to "stay away" from Robert L. Vesco and his $200,000 contribution to President Nixon's re-election campaign.

The witness was Sally Quinn, blonde Washington Post reporter. She did not, however, see Mitchell and the volunteer campaign aide, Daniel Hofgren, together at a fund-raising dinner where the remark was said to have been passed. Mitchell denied he ever saw Hofgren at the gathering.

MISS QUINN was one of a series of mop-up witnesses called by the government as it neared the end of its criminal conspiracy case against Mitchell and former Commerce Secretary Maurice H. Stans in federal court here.

Another was ousted White House counsel John W. Dean III, making his third appearance for the prosecution.

Mitchell and Stans are accused of conspiring to obstruct a massive Securities and Exchange Commission fraud investigation of Vesco's international financial complex, in return for the latter's secret $200,000 cash contribution to President Nixon's 1972 campaign.

Miss Quinn recently returned to the Washington Post after a highly publicized five-month assignment as anchorwoman on the CBS "Morning News."

HOFGREN TESTIFIED that at the fund-raising gala at the Washington Hilton Hotel March 8, 1972, he asked Mitchell if he'd seen Vesco that day and that the defendant told him, "Stay away from that." Hofgren said they bumped into each other at a reception that preceded the dinner and that he left before the actual dinner began.

Mitchell's denial of this account is the basis of a perjury count against him in the indictment. He said that he and his wife, Martha, arrived after the 7 p.m. reception was over and went directly into the banquet room to find most of the nearly 2,000 guests already seated for dinner.

Miss Quinn testified she covered the Washington Hilton dinner that night and interviewed the Mitchells for three or four minutes when they arrived about 8 p.m. The text of her subsequent story was not allowed into evidence at the trial.

"Then they went through the ropes and into the reception area," Miss Quinn continued, estimating it subsequently took 20 to 30 minutes to clear the reception area and get the guests into the banquet room.

Dean was a star government witness at the trial last month. He returned briefly a few days later to correct a brief portion of his original testimony.

IN HIS INITIAL appearance as a witness, Dean said he was hopeful his testimony at the Mitchell-Stans trial would be considered when he comes up for sentencing. He has pleaded guilty to obstructing justice in the investigation of the 1972 break-in of Democratic national headquarters in the Watergate in Washington.

"Have you been sentenced yet?" asked Mitchell's lawyer, Peter Fleming Jr., as he opened cross-examination.

"No, I have not," Dean replied.

The 35-year-old Dean's latest appearance was intended by the government to refute certain aspects of Stans' testimony. For example, the former commerce secretary said he had reported on Vesco's SEC troubles in a Nov. 13, 1972, telephone conversation with Dean.

"No, I have no recollection of that conversation," Dean testified.

Stans said the two talked again later about Vesco during a plane flight from Washington to New York.

"Did you have a conversation with Mr. Stans about Vesco on that flight to New York?" Dean was asked.

"No, I did not," he replied.

There was defense testimony that Stans in conversation with Mitchell was concerned solely with the propriety of the Vesco contribution and that Mitchell assured him it was proper to accept it.

Higher Gas Prices Defended

Sawhill Predicts Increased Supplies

WASHINGTON (AP) — John C. Sawhill, the new federal energy chief, defended the higher fuel prices that have settled in around the country and indicated Monday they would pay off in increased supplies.

"Prices higher than in years past and substantial but reasonable profits are seen to be vital to our future well-being," he told the Senate Commerce Committee. "Where price elicits new supply, it serves a useful economic function and benefits consumers with increased supply, which ultimately results in lower prices."

SAWHILL, APPOINTED last week to the nation's top energy post, predicted that the oil industry's financial statements for the first quarter of 1974 would show a continuing rise in profits which increased dramatically in 1973.

He also predicted, in comments made to reporters after testifying, that the price of gasoline would not rise "more than a few cents" per gallon.

"Prices are now in the low 50s," he said. "I wouldn't expect them to go over 60 cents."

They already have reached that point in some areas of the nation.

Sawhill criticized the proposed Consumer Energy Act which would, among other things, create a federal oil and gas corporation.

"It's been through the genius of our private enterprise system that we've been able to gain control over most of the reserves."

CONTINUING THE Administration's arguments for eventual deregulation of the price of natural gas at the wellhead, Sawhill said such control "causes uncertainty and reduces investment in domestic exploration and development."

Sawhill said that in the late 1940s, 30 wildcat wells were needed to find a major field of oil.

"By 1972, 45 and 46 failed to produce a major field. Nine in 10 new field wildcat wells were unsuccessful," he said.

"Low prices in an increasingly high-cost, high-risk industry thus mean that reserves that would be found and produced at higher prices are simply left unfound and unproduced," he said, quoting Prof. Edmund Kitch of the University of Chicago.

SAWHILL LISTED his own suggestions to increase competition.

In addition to deregulating the price of natural gas, these were: excluding the major oil companies from joint leasing ventures; equalizing the price of crude oil paid by refiners, and halting the penetration of major oil companies into the retail gasoline market.

Jack Moskowitz, an assistant to the chairman of Common Cause, the citizen's lobby, said that without a federal oil and gas corporation the extent of government control would be to regulate "prices set by a handful of powerful corporations who exercise dominant control at every stage of production and marketing processes."

New President Elected in Colombia

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Alfonso Lopez Michelsen, a critic of U.S. policy in Latin America and the candidate of the center-left Liberal Party, has won a landslide victory in Colombia's presidential elections.

Though he had been the favorite in opinion polls, his lead of 1,790,000 votes to 1,088,000 for Conservative candidate Alvaro Gomez Hurtado, came as a surprise to practically everyone. Returns were first coming in Monday from outlying districts.

Battle Continues on Mt. Hermon

TEL AVIV (AP) — Artillery fired along the Syrian-Israeli front and on strategic Mt. Hermon on Monday, while Egyptian President Anwar Sadat sought ties with Europe and praised American peace efforts in the Middle East.

Israeli forces claimed full control of disputed Mt. Hermon amid artillery and long-distance tank battles raging for the 42nd day on the Golan Heights front.

Syrian MIG jets penetrated into the October war bulge during the fighting, the Israeli military command admitted, but a spokesman denied Arab claims that the Syrians and Israelis were still struggling for control of the strategic mountaintop. "We are sitting on it, and we are controlling it," the command spokesman said.

Stock Market Closes Slightly Down

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market drifted to a mild loss in another inconclusive session Monday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials eased off 1.33 to 858.57, and the New York Stock Exchange's composite index of all its listed common stocks was down .22 at 49.69.

Jurors Called for Henley Trial

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Dist. Judge Preston Dial summoned 300 potential jurors for the Houston mass murders case after granting one defense pretrial motion Monday and denying eight others.

Elmer Wayne Henley, 17, charged with six of the 27 deaths of teen-agers discovered in Houston last August, is to be tried here July 1. Dial took just 20 minutes Monday to dispose of defense efforts to delay the trial or move it from San Antonio because of news coverage. Henley's trial was transferred from Houston to San Antonio because of publicity.

What Did We Do?

Two giant pandas at the National Zoological Park in Washington got to know each other after they were placed together for the first time. Park officials hope that the pets, gifts to the United States from the People's Republic of China, will mate. So far the pandas seem to be just having a good time, enjoying company.

County Court at-Law

Four Candidates Seek Judgeships

(Editor's Note: This is the first in a series on the contested races in the May 4 Democratic primary and the candidates involved.)

The County Courts at-Law handle criminal misdemeanors, civil cases with the amount in question limited to $5,000 and condemnations.

A backlog of cases has flooded the courts, so much so, that this year the new County Court at-Law No. 3, created by the Legislature, goes into operation.

For County Court at-Law No. 1, Ken

Houp and Brock Jones are seeking the judgeship held by Jerry Dellana.

Houp

Ken Houp has been with the law firm of Slayton, Maloney, Hearne, Babb and Cowden since 1970. Before that he worked for the Governors Criminal Justice Council.

Houp obtained his BA from the University of Florida in 1967 and graduated from the University School of Law in 1970.

Houp said he believes the courts need to be more effectively administered. "The system now works to the detriment of the defendant. There are 300 to 400 people packed into the courts each court day," Houp said.

Jones

Houp's opponent is Brock Jones. Jones graduated from the University with a BA in 1960. He graduated from the University School of Law in 1967 and has worked seven years in trial courts, in administration and in the development of the community.

the '74 primaries

"I believe the people are demanding the trial courts be responsive to the public need for a fair, impartial and efficient administration of justice. I believe the judicial system has the ability to respond; I want to be a part of that response," Jones said.

Candidates for the newly created County Court at-Law No. 3 are Leonard Franklin and Jim Dear.

Franklin

Franklin obtained his BA from UCLA and his law degree from the Brooklyn Law School. Since 1957, he has been in private law practice and has been in Austin since 1962. He has worked for the American Civil Liberties Union and is a member of the Lawyers Referral Panel. Franklin has served as city judge of Westlake Hills for six years.

"The courts have to be humanized and individualized," Franklin said. "It will take experience and background to do it, and I have that," he said.
